Biohabitats Names Ed Morgereth Practice Leader

Baltimore, MD—January 17, 2017—Ecological consulting firm Biohabitats, Inc. today announced the promotion of Senior Ecologist Ed Morgereth to Practice Leader. In this role, Morgereth will guide the firm's work related to conservation planning, coastal restoration, and climate change adaptation.

Morgereth, who joined Biohabitats in 1997, has over two decades of experience leading projects to protect, restore and enhance terrestrial and aquatic ecosystems, including initiatives aimed at building coastal resilience in the face of climate change and sea level rise.

"Ed brings knowledge, passion, and innovation to our work," said Biohabitats president and founder, Keith Bowers. "His leadership helps ensure that our suite of practices remains responsive to today's ever changing environmental challenges."

Biohabitats specializes exclusively in ecological restoration, conservation planning, and regenerative design. The firm operates out of seven bioregion offices and has headquarters in Baltimore, MD.
